Just in Time for Passover ... The Seder, A New Contemporary Jewish Haggadah Available Nationally

(Cincinnati, OH – March 17, 2004) On Monday, April 5, 2004, when Jews around the world gather to celebrate Passover, a weeklong holiday commemorating the Jews' exodus from Egyptian bondage; they'll have a new Haggadah (service for the ritual meal) to draw from. For the first time, The Seder, a contemporary Jewish Haggadah created by the Ritual and Lifecycle Committee at Cincinnati, Ohio's Congregation Beth Adam is available nationally via Amazon.com.

The Seder tells the story of the Jews' freedom from slavery, melding traditional and contemporary liturgy to create a Passover ritual that is meaningful, relevant and appropriate for all ages. The stories and traditions of ancient times are retold in a contemporary way to bring meaning to modern day Jews. This Haggadah, a graphic design award winner, provides direction for beginners and comfort for 'old timers' as they celebrate this meaningful holiday together.

"We're thrilled to be able to offer our liturgy to a national audience," states Congregation Beth Adam Rabbi Robert B. Barr. "Our liturgy seeks to give voice to who we are and what we believe and to foster intellectual honesty, human responsibility, self expression and shared participation." We have tried to create the opportunity for all who read it to develop a deeper sense of their moral and spiritual selves."
